Judgments, Choices, and Decisions: Effective Management Through Self-knowledge. Warren J. Keegan. Wiley, 1984 - Management - 242 pages. 0 Reviews. Discusses the various management styles and examines the functions of intuition, feeling, sensing, and analytical thinking in solving management problems.

In medical crises, some choices are extremely hard emotionally, even heartbreaking, but clearly necessary. Covid-19 confronts us with a different kind of decision—the tragic choice, in which every available option is unacceptable. The classic examples of such situations involve choosing who gets a ventilator when too few are available and ...

If I am right, the idea that good moral judgment and decision-making can result from entirely automatic and subconscious processes gains traction. My goal in this paper is to show that reflectivism fails to include the full range of cases of moral decision-making and that a theory of automaticity may do a better job.

Decision analysis (DA) is the logic of making a decision using quantitative models of the decider's factual and value judgments. DA is already widely used in business, government, medicine, economics, law, and science.

We suggest that for cases involving children this might be assisted by understanding judgments as performing four functions in particular: the communicative (explaining decisions to children implicated in the decision in a way that they can understand); the instructive (conveying decisions in ways that can be understood by children as a subset of the wider public, to support children's legal ...

Despite the many formal methods available most decisions are made intuitively?that is, without apparent reasoning and almost instinctively. This revised and updated edition emphasizes the unstructured and natural way people make judgements and exercise choice, which accounts for almost all real decision-making activity, but argues that intuition can be both studied and educated. The book is ...

Judgment and decision-making (JDM) research embraces a broad interdisciplinary array of topics concerned with human choice. It includes both descriptive studies, aimed at understanding what real decision makers actually do and normative (or prescriptive) work, aimed at advising people how they might make better choices.

Despite the many formal methods available most decisions are made intuitively?that is, without apparent reasoning and almost instinctively. This revised and updated edition emphasizes the unstructured and natural way people make judgements and exercise choice, which accounts for almost all real decision-making activity, but argues that intuition can be both studied and educated. The study of judgment and decision making entails three interrelated forms of research: (1) normative analysis, identifying the best courses of action, given decision makers' values; (2) descriptive studies, examining actual behavior in terms comparable to the normative analyses; and (3) prescriptive interventions, helping individuals to make better choices, bridging the gap between the normative ideal and the descriptive reality. The research is grounded in analytical foundations shared by ...
